There is eas an intituding polesn on the internal vicers and excreting organis of the body. The liver bacomies torpid and falls to secrete act only this virus, but also the hills from the blood. Both the virus, and the bile accumulate in the circulation, and produce violent constitutions disorder. The spicen, the kidneys, and the stomach sympathics with the liver, and become disordered also. Finally, the instinct of our organism, as patriase with the liver, and become dayments also. Finally, the instinct of our organism, as if is an attempt to expel, the noxious infusion, emecutrates the whole blood of the body in the lineral excretories to ferre them to east it out. The blood leaves the surface, and rushes to the central organs with congestive violence. This is the Chill. But in this effort fails. Then the Fevers follows, in which the blood leaves the central organs and rushes to the surface, as if in another effort to expel the irritating poison through the other great accretory—the salls. In this also it fails, and the system abandons the attempt exhausted, and waits for the recovery of strength to repeat the hopeins effort mother day. These are the fits or paroxysms of Fevers and Acum. Such constitutional disorder will of course undermine the health if it is not removed. We have labored to fluid, and have found, an antidote.

were elired in my breast, as I thought on the incidents of the last night. On the asme day I determined to return to New Orleans—to leave the scene of that drams, in which I had acted so strange a part. I took leave of my kind hostess, and heard the sweet daughtsr's nigh of action I was soon for to the labyrioth of society—in the dissipations of the city, ondervoring to drown every thought of the whole transaction.
